Santa Rosa Memorial Hospital Negotiations with NUHW

Representatives of Santa Rosa Memorial Hospital (SRMH) and the National Union of Healthcare Workers (NUHW) met on Friday, June 14, for the first time to begin negotiating the terms of a successor collective bargaining agreement between the parties.

It was a very positive and productive first session. The groups achieved 15 tentative agreements concerning a variety of subjects. Professional and cordial discussion around several additional open articles also occurred. A highlight of the day included a candid discussion about improving the labor-management relationship and things both parties could do to foster positive relations. NUHW representatives presented SRMH with a message from represented caregivers that included a commitment to and alignment with our mission and values. Guided by our values, we are positive we can work together on opportunities for improvements and achieve good outcomes for all parties.

The parties are set to resume negotiations in July and agreed to meet on the below dates:

- July 9 & 10
- July 15 or 16 (to be confirmed)
- July 29 & 30

We look forward to return to the bargaining table with NUHW representatives.

Thank you.

We are serious in our promise to you — and all our caregivers — to help ease your way. If you have any questions, please contact your core leader or HR.